We're in the Tiger month, so the Tidal Gua is Hexagram 11. Although the spring equinox will not happen until March, we can see a balance of light and darkness in the solid and broken lines of the Hexagram. The hours of daylight surpass the hours of darkness in the Rabbit month, as we see in Hexagram 34.

We're focusing on Hexagram 11 for the Tiger month. The yin lines of the Kun trigram are on the top, while the yang lines of Qian are on the bottom. Earth over Heaven. The force of Heaven is coming up while the energy of Earth is moving down. This is considered auspicious. As the month progresses, maybe it's less so.

To relate Hexagram 11 to what might be happening in this Wood Tiger month, I have to say that it's line 6 that catches my attention. I probably should have noticed this last year, but at the point where the Yi Jing instructs against "using the army" is very close to February 24th. In 2022 that was the date of the Russian invasion of Ukraine. Hexagram 11 suggests a time that begins with the wonders of spring and the harmony of yin and yang: as if Heaven was under the ground. It is called peace, but then the peace is broken. A change is coming. Line 6 is the end of tranquility – depending on human choices, right?

To put this in the context of current events, I expect we'll see more power grabs coming towards the end of February. One message of Hexagram 11 is that there's no good way for people to come back from the use of force. It damages all parties. I find this worrisome in a global context as we seem to be breaking our own structures by way of law enforcement, military, and our judicial, legislative and executive branches. We'll be seeing big protests and demonstrations this month all over the world. These are not the kind of grassroots movements we will see in March; it's more like those in power trying to grab more power.

Next up: Hexagram 34. What happens when power is misused?

Wood Tiger Month

A Wood Tiger month brings ideas about duty and sacrifice and how those two things often go together. The Wood Tiger pillar is all Wood, yang Wood over the Tiger's yang Wood. That's pure movement – the stillness of winter is over. Time to get moving. Time to right what is wrong. This is the energy of the Wood Tiger, which, we might understand more if we look at 1974 or 1914.

If the Wood Tiger has you feeling compelled to march off in the name of saving the world from the bad guys, get a job description. Do you understand what you will be asked to do? I have a lot of love for protesters and antifascists but I also want you to make sure you are prepared for what you might be getting into this time. Be sure you can handle the physical demand. There are other ways to help. Not everyone is prepared or physically able to go to the front lines, but anyone can work for justice. Anyone can be part of a network. No need to sign up to be wrecked.

In any year, this fresh Wood energy of the Tiger is the best for starting things, exercising and moving. I find it funny that many people make new year's resolutions about physical fitness in January, not realizing that they are trying to get moving in the Ox month. The Ox consists mainly of yin Earth and it's wet. The Ox is fertile like mud or muck can be. For timing, if you want to get moving, this means in January the elements are kind of against you. Might as well wait until February for those exercise related resolutions.

I think the Wood Tiger is the wildest Tiger – maybe the Tiger that stays truest to its nature. This can be both a benefit and a curse. The over-the-top Wood chi of the Wood Tiger might make for a natural instinctive leader, but the Wood Tiger might also struggle to disengage from that position even at times where disengagement would save their lives. A Tiger's mistakes come when they forget to stop moving for a moment to consider whether what they are doing is going to get them what they really want. They may be unclear about what that is too.

I worry about this quality in the Tigers that I know. I don't want them to get hurt or lose their fierceness, but some Tigers get so hung up on a single rejection or injury that they make their life a mission of revenge. An extreme example of this can be found by observing 1986 Fire Tiger Lauren Boebert and 1974 Wood Tiger Marjorie Taylor Greene making a mockery of their power by fighting each other in the bathroom earlier this year. What an embarrassing way to diminish your reputation.

I don't appreciate Jordan Peterson (1962 Water Tiger) either, but I do think the way he is destroying himself (and others) because he is unable or unwilling to disengage from his past hurt feelings is sad. A woman hurt him with rejection, so now he is dedicated to hurting women.

I've been watching the Playboy documentary and thinking the same thing about 1926 Fire Tiger Hugh Hefner. Hugh is the prototype of the modern sexual predator. I imagine people like Jeffrey Epstein saw him as a role model. It seems that a formative experience for Hugh was a rejection from a young woman that he experienced as a young man. Then he made a lifestyle and a brand out of teaching other men how to break women down, hurt them and drug them into submission. It's not lost on me that in a sense, maybe these women signed up for it. After all, it was a cult.

Maybe the challenge of this Tiger month is to learn not to sign up to be hurt, but when you do get hurt, remember that it's a natural part of life. Hurts are just lessons we didn't ask for. Why would we? The question is whether you want to learn or not. If you're a natural leader, maybe you have some predator in you too. It's all in what you do with that, right?

Challenged: Monkey, Rat, Dragon, Snake

Star 8 Month

It’s a new year, and now the 4 Star is in the center. The energy of the 4 star has to do with curiosity, research, discovery and scandal. I think we can expect some innovations in medicine and disease prevention. The 4 Star is yin Wood – like the Rabbit.

For the Wood Tiger month, we have the 8 star in the center. It’s often associated with wealth and real estate. 8 has become somewhat untimely even though it’s considered benevolent. It’s an Earth star, representing yang Earth or Mountain.

If you know your Five Elements, you will remember that Wood breaks down Earth. You may also recall that the natural home of the 5 star is in the center. So we have 5 (home), 4 (annual) and 8 monthly.

If you don’t already have Water in the center of your house as an annual adjustment, place it this month. You can use a bowl of fresh water, changed daily.

Annual San Sha is in the W, monthly San Sha is in the N.

Enhance & Mitigate

- S      Add fire to dispel conflict and bring fame and wealth. Place a bright light to be kept on 24/7.
- NW    Stay out.
- SW    Blocked pipes. Could be literal if kitchen or bath is in this location. Add Metal or T’ang lung.

Remember, these adjustments can be done in the noted locations of the house OR the locations of a room. Cures are not meant to be used in bedrooms.

Solar Fortnights

First Fortnight: Li Chun 立春 (Spring Begins) February 4th 10:47

There are different calculations for the start of the year, but today is the day everyone agrees that the New Year has officially started. The Tiger month marks the beginning of spring, which includes the Rabbit and Dragon months. When Wood arrives the natural thing to do is start moving more. If you're working with the Wood element for health, this is often a helpful time for progress.

Second Fortnight: Yu Shui 雨水 (Rain Water) February 19th 06:30

Solar and lunar timing converge as this day also brings the New Moon. There's a lot happening on this day in the sky and therefore, on the Earth too. The solar fortnight or festival is called Rain Water but the day itself relates mostly to Fire. Should be interesting.

Phases of the Moon

February 5th

Lunar Month Wood Tiger

Full Moon (Snow Moon) 10:28 PST

If you use crystals for protection or repelling, this month you can put them out under the full moon to restore their power.

February 19th

Lunar Month Wood Rabbit

New Moon 23:06 PST

Careful with Fire. This is not an auspicious day. Possible breakup, fighting, or burnout for Horses.

I recommend waiting for a more auspicious day to wash and recharge crystals such as rose quartz or other crystals meant to nurture or attract.

Remove Days

A Remove Day is the second day in the sequence of the 12 Day Officers. These days are designated for removal but not every Remove Day is a helpful day. For satisfying results, watch for the ones that are.

Remove Days are appropriate for intensive cleaning or discarding clutter. Get rid of rodents or invasive insects, break habits or break up. Schedule surgery or other medical/dental treatments and procedures on a favorable Remove Day if you can.

There are two Remove Days this month but neither is helpful for that purpose.

Tuesday February 14th

Not a usable Remove Day. See Dailies for details.

Sunday February 26th

Not a usable Remove Day. See Dailies for details.

Personalized Date Selection

These dates apply to more than your birth year. Find any one of your four pillars in the personalized dates – that's your lucky day! The position of the pillar will give further nuance to the nature of the good fortune. The elemental implications of the stems & branches and their relationship to your day stem will reveal more specifics about what to expect.

Year Pillar:	Has to do with your physical body and what you do with it, ancestors, family traits. In terms of luck the year pillar is said to take the first “hit” of any event, good or bad.
Month Pillar:	Relates to career, work environment, training, age mates and peers, siblings, exes and your modus operandi
Day Pillar:	Yourself and true partner; your immediate environment and home life
Hour Pillar:	The innermost you, your children, future, hopes and dreams.

The numbers that follow each Stem (Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal, Water) indicate the year that matches the pillar. The animal name at the end will tell the Branch.

For example, when you see "Metal 90 Horse" that's because 1990 is a Metal Horse year.

Here's what you may not have known: the Metal Horse Pillar could be in your BaZi even if it's not your year and it counts too! There are also Metal Horse months, days and hours. So - to get the most out of the Serious Dailies you need to know all four of your pillars: Year, Month, Day, Hour.
